

NDCPD bids farewell to Fifield and promotes Askvig to executive director

Brent Askvig, Ph.D., was appointed to replace Bryce Fifield, Ph.D., as executive director of the North Dakota Center for Persons with Disabilities on Minot State University's campus, according to Gary Rabe, vice president for academic affairs, effective July 1.

"Askvig clearly knows the field and has a vision for how NDCPD can grow and accomplish new and exciting initiatives," said Rabe. "He is a respected member of the MSU community, and I look forward to working with him as a member of my academic affairs team."

Before his current position, Askvig was the associate director of NDCPD and a professor of special education. While continuing as a special education faculty member, he served as assistant dean in the Graduate School. Askvig has been involved in numerous local, state and national activities in the disability community.

Askvig earned his bachelor's degree in elementary education and mental retardation and master's degree in special education from Minot State University. He completed his doctoral degree with specializations in special education and educational research from the University of Idaho, Moscow.

"I am excited about my new role in NDCPD and the people in the center. Dr. Fifield has done a tremendous job over the past 11 years and has established a solid foundation for NDCPD's future growth," said Askvig. "I am also excited about NDCPD's role in supporting persons with disabilities throughout the state, and in working with MSU on its Vision 2013."

In July, Fifield became the executive director of the Center for Persons with Disabilities at Utah State University, Logan. By assuming this new position, he had the opportunity to return to the university and center where he began his career in the disability field. Under Fifield's leadership, NDCPD experienced dynamic growth. Specifically, he provided expertise in reaching rural communities through distance technology and services.

Area educators attend Northern Plains Writing Project Institutes

In its fifth year of existence, 22 North Dakota educators are on Minot State University's campus for its annual Northern Plains Writing Project Summer Institute and Advanced Summer Institute. Each year, NPWP's outreach grows, and the number of teachers served increases.

"The Northern Plains Writing Project gathers teachers from across the state. Together, we engage in dialogue concerning what we do in the classroom, about our educational philosophies, and about the challenges we face as professionals in an ever-changing profession," said Robert Kibler, associate professor of English and director of NPWP. "We engage in cutting-edge research so that we can improve upon what we already do well in the classroom, and so that we can better share what we do well with others. Those who go through the institutes are definitely charged up for the next phase of their careers--regardless of where they are in their careers--and one of the project's goals is to help teachers become effective leaders in the educational community. In a profession defined by change, we work cooperatively to become the makers of change, rather than the passive recipients of it, as it should be."

NPWP, which is one of two National Writing Projects sites in North Dakota, is housed at MSU and funded by the university, the state and the federal government. Its purpose is to help strengthen what K-12 teachers do in our state classrooms. There are over 200 NWP sites across the nation, and all sites function according to the model of "teachers teaching teachers."

The Summer Institute runs through July 28, and the Advanced Summer Institute is until July 18 (and online through July 28). For further information, contact Kibler at 858-3876 or robert.kibler@minotstateu.edu.

Individuals scheduled for the panel will include: Tom Ross, KMOT; Jim Olson, KXMC; Marvin Baker, Minot Daily News; and Mark Lyman, Minot State University.

The visitors are invited to the United States under the auspices of the Department of State's International Visitor Leadership Program. Their program is arranged by World Learning Visitor Exchange Program (formerly Delphi International).

MSU Unity in Our Community campaign launched

The Minot State Unity in Our Community campaign officially launched at the Young Professionals meeting on July 8. The purpose for this campaign is to bring the Minot business community to the Minot State University campus and allow students, faculty and staff to know businesses support the university.

The campaign wants participating Minot businesses to display a designed frame that includes the campaign logo and three caveats. The three caveats are: the participating business supports MSU, it provides hiring opportunities to MSU students and/or graduates, and the business speaks highly of MSU.

The campaign participation fee will be $100 annually per business. The fees will be directed toward one yearly event, open to the Minot community, to be held on the MSU campus. The first event will be during Homecoming Week, Sept. 21-28.

Young Professionals in Minot is made up of individuals between the ages of 21 and 39 and has grown to over 165 members in less than a year. The group's mission statement is "to create social and business networking opportunities and community enhancement projects for young professionals in the Minot area." Any business interested in participating or getting further details can contact the YP network through their Web site, www.ypminot.com or Scott Louser at louser@minot.com.

Lyman appointed MSU director of public information

Mark Lyman, of Minot, has been named director of public information at Minot State University, according to President

David Fuller. Most recently, he has been the anchor and producer for KMOT-TV's evening and night reports for three years. Lyman began at MSU on July 7.

"Mr. Lyman brings with him an impressive background in journalism and broadcasting, community service, and a genuine commitment to the people in our community," said MSU President David Fuller.

"Mark works so well with people. He will be able to bring those abilities to our university to publicize what Minot State offers and its potential for great growth in the future."

Fuller said he is confident of Lyman's ability to serve as the senior leader for the public information office and that he was impressed by the new director's understanding of the critical role the university plays in Minot and in the region.

"Making the jump to MSU is something I have wanted for years," said Lyman. "The chance now to communicate in a fast-paced environment, work closely with President Fuller, students, faculty and staff to reach out to a growing community excites me.”

Currently, Lyman is president for the Community Relations Council at Burdick Job Corp, and he has served as an emcee for various community events. Other community involvement includes being a troop committee chairman for Boy Scouts and various leadership positions within his church.

Prior to being promoted to an anchor and producer position at KMOT in 2005, Lyman worked as a general assignments reporter. He earned a bachelor’s degree in broadcast journalism from Brigham Young University in 2002.

Marv Semrau, vice president for advancement, chaired the search. He was assisted by an advisory committee comprised of members of the College of Business, the Office of Publications and Design, human resources and the marketing department.

MSU promotes Lichtenberger as associate registrar

Kelly Lichtenberger has been named as the associate registrar in Minot State University’s Office of the Registrar.

Lichtenberger is replacing Jennifer Sick, who was promoted to registrar, and both promotions become effective Aug. 1.

Lichtenberger began working for MSU in February 2007 as the transcript records specialist. In July 2007, she was moved up to the records specialist position. As the associate registrar, Lichtenberger will be responsible for maintaining all curriculum records, assembling the master catalog, preparing term and class schedules, organizing the campus room schedules and activities calendar, processing graduation check outs, managing work study students, and assisting other registrar’s office specialists. She will also have the general responsibility to serve as a campus trainer and subject-matter expert for PeopleSoft.

“I am happy that Kelly Lichtenberger has accepted the position of associate registrar,” said Tania Balas, registrar. “She brings a wealth of experience with her working in the field of higher education, and she is an asset to the office and the campus.”

Lichtenberger earned a Bachelor of Arts degree in humanities from the University of Maryland University College, which is headquartered in Adelphi, Md. She worked for the University of Maryland in Spangdahlem, Germany, for three years as a field representative and in Lakenheath, England for four years as a field and senior field representative. In these positions, Lichtenberger was responsible for managing office staff, term scheduling, and room scheduling. She also trained office staff, registered students, sold textbooks, and communicated with the Heidelberg, Germany main campus.

Lichtenberger and her husband Russ, who is retired from the U.S. Air Force, have two children.

MSU offers sympathy to Loy family

Minot State University has been greatly saddened by the death of H. Michael Loy, a visiting professor of communication arts this past academic year, of natural causes on July 5. We extend our condolences to his family, colleagues and friends.

“We are grateful for the capabilities that Michael Loy brought to our campus, since he stepped in as a visiting professor of communication arts this past fall. He touched many people’s lives through his involvement in campus productions and the Mouse River Players,” said Linda Olson, chair of the Division of Humanities. “Michael was unassuming and gentle. We will miss him.”

While at MSU, Loy taught speech and theatre courses. He received his Bachelor of Arts from Concordia College in Moorhead, and his Master of Fine Arts from Trinity University in Dallas, Texas. He also did post-graduate work at North Dakota State University.

Buettner-Schmidt named a Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Fellow

Recently, Kelly Buettner-Schmidt, chair of the Department of Nursing, was awarded a three-year Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Doctoral in Nursing Research Fellowship beginning in 2008-09. Fellowship recipients, like Buettner-Schmidt, will receive funding for tuition, along with resources for computers, textbooks and travel.

“I am excited to be the recipient of this fellowship; health policies can impact people’s health in their daily lives, as well as when seeking health care services,” said Buettner-Schmidt. “As a former public health nurse, my hope is to improve the health of all people through policy development, implementation and evaluation.”

Buettner-Schmidt began doctoral studies at the University of New Mexico in August 2007 as a part-time student. She was encouraged by UNM faculty to apply for this fellowship because of her extensive work and research in policy related to tobacco prevention and cessation.

In December 2007, UNM received a five-year, $4.8 million grant from RWJF to increase the quantity and diversity of nurses with knowledge of health policy. The grant was utilized by the UNM to establish a health policy concentration in the nursing doctoral program.

For 35 years RWJF has focused on the crucial health care issues facing the U.S. As the nation's largest philanthropy devoted exclusively to improving the health and health care of all Americans, the foundation works with a diverse group of organizations and individuals to identify solutions and achieve comprehensive, meaningful and timely change.

Dr. Joseph Hegstad Scholarship Fund established

The Heritage Singers and the Voices of Note have established a new endowed scholarship at Minot State University honoring professor emeritus of music Joseph Hegstad.

Hegstad, now of Scottsdale, Ariz., was a member of the music faculty from 1970 to 1995 and served as division chairman. While at MSU, he was choral director for the Concert Choir, Vagabond Male Chorus and the Jazz Madrigal Singers. Hegstad had previously performed as a baritone soloist with the United States Air Force Band "Singing Sergeants."

Hegstad is a founding member and former director of the Heritage Singers and is credited for continuing the traditional December performance of "Messiah." In 1992 the initiating performers of the work, the Minot Symphony Orchestra and MSU Concert Choir, chose not to continue with the piece.

Hegstad combined the Heritage Singers and Voices of Note to carry on the perennial favorite.

The Heritage Singers and Voices of Note presented a concert on Mother's Day, May 11, to honor Hegstad and his wife, Jackie. Hegstad directed several numbers and was featured as a soloist. A free-will offering was accepted at the concert to help establish the scholarship.

Faculty and staff: Starting July 1, the Minot State registrar’s office will no longer run unofficial transcripts. All transcripts will be official and will be run on red security paper. Each official transcript will be $5. Students also have the option of requesting same-day transcripts for a $10 surcharge.
