

Institutional Review Board (IRB)
Protocol Extension and Revision

Extension       Revision

Extension: Approved IRB protocols are good for the time period indicated on the IRB Protocol Application, or one-year from the date of approval if not specified on the protocol application. If your research is not completed through the data collection stage at the end of the time period on the approved protocol (or one-year from the approval date if a time period is not specified), please check Extension above and attach an explanation of your need for an extension and include your plan for completion of the research project.

Revision: IRB approval must be obtained for any changes to protocol or consent forms prior to initiating such changes. Please attach a description of the procedures or methods that have changed. If changes affect the informed consent, please include an updated Informed Consent form or script.

This policy covers both exempt and expedited projects. Full board projects are covered on the Full-Board Protocol form.
