PIO update

Nov. 22, 1963, I was just shy of two years old. My mother says my first complete sentence was “the president’s been shot,” no doubt due to endless media coverage. A friend’s slightly older husband remembers youthful disappointment cartoons were pre-empted. But to the generation before us, JFK’s assassination was the “9/11” of their time.

Tuesday (Sept. 25), at 2 p.m. in Ann Nicole Nelson Hall, MSU is honored to host a presentation by Clint Hill, the Secret Service agent assigned to guard Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy from 1960 to 1964. Hill, a Washburn native, is also a Norsk Høstfest 2012 Scandinavian-American Hall of Fame inductee.

Hill will discuss his new book, “Mrs. Kennedy and Me: An Intimate Memoir,” in conversation with co-author Lisa McCubbin and give a multimedia presentation. It is free and open to the public and will be followed by a book signing.

Take advantage of this rare opportunity to share an iconic memory with someone who closely guarded his personal story for five decades.

Revisiting a riveting moment in history

Hill was the Secret Service agent assigned to guard the glamorous and intensely private Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy from 1960 to 1964. In those four years, he went from being a reluctant guardian to a fiercely loyal watchdog and, in many ways, her closest friend.

Looking back 50 years, Hill tells his story for the first time, with unforgettable details, startling revelations and sparkling intimate moments of a man doing the most exciting job in the world and recounting the tragedy that ended it all too soon.

Hill will present rarely seen personal photographs and videos with Mrs. Kennedy and her children along with a United States Secret Service video of what it was actually like to be in the Presidential Motorcade Nov. 22, 1963, in Dallas, Texas.

Hill’s presentation is free and open to the public.

Peg Morris and Josh Snyder are leading this year’s festival.

The festival starts Friday at 7:30 p.m. with a meeting of all the writers, directors and actors. Actors bring one prop and one costume. A photograph is taken and given to the writers. At 8:30 p.m., everyone leaves but the writers, who spend the night creating five new 10-minute plays.

Fall Assessment Day is scheduled for Oct. 3, and activity information will be forthcoming. There are no classes until 3 p.m.

‘Strange Like Me’ promotes acceptance

In celebration of National Diversity Day (Oct. 5), Minot State University is sponsoring “Strange Like Me,” an interactive theatrical performance in Aleshire Theater, 3 p.m. GTC Dramatic Dialogues, a Minneapolis theater troupe, will present the program.

This event is designed to encourage students to examine and discuss their feelings and actions when confronting people who are “different” from themselves. Two scenes follow six students as they navigate the sometimes difficult terrain of multicultural campus relationships. During talk-backs, audience members can confront the characters and voice their own opinions on issues of racism, sexism and homophobia. The diversity discussion is capped off by a short theatrical scene that reveals the lasting scars prejudice leaves on its victims.

For more information, contact Bethany Keusch, global education coordinator, at bethany.stai@minotstateu.edu or 858-4645 or Annette Mennem, Native American Center director, at annette.mennem@minotstateu.edu or 858-3112.

NDCPD to host disability-health awareness walk

The North Dakota Center for Persons with Disabilities, a University Center of Excellence on developmental disabilities on Minot State University’s campus, is hosting “Talk, Walk and Roll,” a disability health-awareness walk Oct. 12, 4-6 p.m. People of all abilities are welcome to participate, and participants will meet in front of Old Main at 4 p.m.

“This event is intended to promote inclusive communities and raise health awareness for people with disabilities in a fun and unique way,” said Emily Rodacker, NDCPD project coordinator. “Talk, Walk and Roll provides an opportunity for participants to talk with people as they walk around the beautiful MSU campus and roll through the evening with friends, just for the health of it.”

October is National Disability Awareness month. Local organizations and businesses will be stationed along the route to provide information and resources on disabilities. Participants can also tour the new Student Wellness Center and see other improvements happening at MSU.
